

- High School/Elementary School Teacher
- College/University Professor
- Craftsman/Blue-Collar Worker
- Entrepreneur
- Attorney
- Accountant
- Middle Manager

TABLE 6-2
THE LIKELIHOOD OF RECEIVING SUBSTANTIAL FINANCIAL GIFTS:
OCCUPATIONAL CONTRASTS AMONG THE ADULT CHILDREN OF THE AFFLUENT

LIKELIHOOD FOR RECEIVING GIFTS
Significantly More Likely	Significantly Less Likely	About Average
• Housewife • Unemployed • Attorney • High School/Elementary School Teacher • College/University Professor	• Craftsman/Blue-Collar Worker • Entrepreneur • Middle Manager • Senior Manager/Executive	• Engineer/Architect/Scientist • Advertising/Marketing/Sales Professional • Physician • Accountant

Type A housewives are often viewed by their parents as peers and confidants rather than understudies. They are seen as intelligent, strong leaders and advisors and are frequently consulted about important family matters, such as estate and retirement planning, the sale of a family business, and the choice of professional service providers. Type As are also conversant with estate tax laws. They are likely to encourage their parents to reduce the size of their estate, and thus minimize the estate tax, by providing gifts to their children. Type A housewives receive substantial cash gifts throughout the early and middle stages of their lives, often