

During my Fastlane journey of discovery, I always sought the absolute, infallible formula that would lead to wealth. What I found was ambiguity and subjective imperatives like “be determined” or “persistence pays” or “it’s not what you know, but who.” While these tidbits compiled part of the formula, they didn’t guarantee wealth. A workable formula uses mathematical constructs and not ambiguous statements. Does wealth have a mathematical formula, a code that you could exploit to tilt the odds in your favor? Yes, the Fastlane quantifies it.

Now for the bad news. Many wealth seekers have false expectations about “money” books and think that some fairy-guru will do the work. The road to wealth has no escort and is always under construction. No one drops millions on your lap; the road is yours to travel and yours alone. I can open the door but I can’t make you walk through it. I don’t claim the Fastlane is easy; it’s hard work. If you expect a four-hour workweek here, you will be disappointed. All I can be is that creepy munchkin pointing off in the distance with a stern directive, “Follow the yellow brick road.”

The Fastlane is that road.

COFFEE WITH A MULTIMILLIONAIRE

I’ve approached this book conversationally, as if you’re my new friend and we’re having coffee in a quaint neighborhood café. That means my intent is to educate you—not to upsell you into some expensive seminar, membership website, or some backend marketing funnel. While I will interact with you as if you’re my friend, let’s face it: I don’t have a clue who you are. I don’t have intimate details about your past, your age, your biases, your spouse, or your education. Therefore, I need to make some general assumptions to ensure that our conversation seems personal to you. My assumptions:

- You look around your life and think, “there’s got to be more.”
- You have big dreams, yet you’re concerned that the road you’re traveling will never converge with those dreams.
- You’re college-bound, college-enrolled, or college-educated.
- You have a job you don’t enjoy or isn’t going to make you rich.
- You have little savings and carry a load of debt.
- You contribute regularly to a 401K.
- You see rich people and wonder, “how did they do it?”
- You have bought a few “get rich quick” books and/or programs.
- You live in a free, democratic society where education and free choice are standards.
- Your parents subscribe to the old school: “Go to college and get a good job.”
- You don’t have any physical talent; your chances of becoming a professional athlete, singer, entertainer, or actor are zero.