

Divorce Wealth from Time

*Time is the coin of your life. It is the only coin you have,
and only you can determine how it will be spent.
Be careful, lest you let other people spend it for you.*

INDUSTRIALIZING WEALTH: DIVORCE FROM TIME

My first Fastlane taste was in my late 20s, when I had one of the worst months of my life: A brutal mix of a bad relationship gone south and some troubling health news served as a lethal cocktail to my business productivity. I spent most of the month in bed with the shades drawn, watching Judge Judy unleash a firestorm of common-sense whoop-ass. During this troubling time I had to cash in my Fastlane lottery ticket—and let me tell you, it paid.

Despite being “checked out” on life, my income actually grew. Yes, grew. My income didn’t stop because I stopped. How did I get so lucky? I was divorced from time. Years earlier, I broke the chains of “my time for money.” This allowed me to escape the stranglehold of the Slowlane equation and operate on the Fastlane playing field.

When your wealth is predicated on factors that you cannot control and that are implicitly limited, you aren’t going to make fast progress. You aren’t in control, because time is in control. You aren’t in control, because the boss is in control. You aren’t in control, because the stock market is in control. How did I escape these controls that society finds perfectly acceptable? Instead of trading my time for money (manual labor), I traded it into a business system—industrialized wealth production.

In my situation, time was working for me, not against me. My business system earned money with the passage of time, and yet was exclusive of my time. It was a
