

- 1) Make them feel better.
- 2) Help them solve a problem.
- 3) Educate them.
- 4) Make them look better (health, nutrition, clothing, makeup).
- 5) Give them security (housing, safety, health).
- 6) Raise a positive emotion (love, happiness, laughter, self-confidence).
- 7) Satisfy appetites, from basic (food) to the risqué (sexual).
- 8) Make things easier.
- 9) Enhance their dreams and give hope.

... and I guarantee, you will be worth millions.

So the next time you're trolling the Web looking to make money, sit back and ask yourself, "What do I have to offer the world?" Offer the world value, and money becomes magnetized to you!

"DO WHAT YOU LOVE" AND DIE AS YOU DO

Beware of another guru-speak: "Do what you love and the money will follow!" Bullshit. That is, unless you want to violate the Commandment of Need. "Do what you love" is another mythical decree perpetrated by hypocritical gurus and so-called life coaches who are probably three clients away from broke. Sadly, the road of "do what you love" rarely converges with wealth. In fact, it might lead you down a road to destructive love.

If you're like me, "do what you love" was never an option. Think about what you love and then think, will someone pay for it? Is it going to solve a need? Are you good enough to make money doing it? Most likely, you aren't.

For "do what you love" to work, you need two things: 1) Your love must solve a need and 2) You must be exceptional at it.

I love to play basketball, but I suck at it. I can't parlay my love of basketball into a career. I love to play piano, but again, I suck at it. I love many things, but I suck at them! If I wanted a career in any of these "loves," I'd need unlimited time and money because no one would pay me a dime to do it. Who wants to endure that ineptness?

Consider this book. I love to write. The book represents a dream of "doing what I love," and that dream was made possible by the Fastlane. If I needed this book to pay for my mortgage, I'm not sure it would. I have no clue if this book will sell 10 copies or 10 million. Therefore I can't rely on it.

"Doing what you love" for money often isn't good enough because we aren't good enough. Additionally, so many people are "doing what they love" that the marketplace for that activity is so crowded and margins become depressed and heavy competition reigns.

Authoring a book is a crowded space. Just because I love to write doesn't