

Burn the Business Plan, Ignite Execution

*Having the world's best idea will do you no good unless you act on it.
People who want milk shouldn't sit on a stool in the middle of the field in hopes that a cow will back up to them.*

THE WORLD REACTS HOW IT REACTS

The world reacts how it reacts. If you think $1 + 1 = 2$ and the world tells you it's 3, you have to let it be, despite what your preconception tells you. When it comes to your ideas, your plans, and your business, you NEVER know what works until you put it out to the world. In business, I call this "putting it out into the box."

Anytime I launched a new service or feature at my Web site, it was an experiment to see how the world reacted. And with each experiment, I'd be surprised. "This new site design is going to be a blockbuster!" And then, wham, hundreds of emails pour in from disgruntled visitors who want to string you up on an oak tree and castrate you.

The ultimate judge-and-jury of ideas is the world and the marketplaces that serve them. If the world likes your offer, they vote by giving you their time, their thoughts, or their money. If they don't like your offer, they withhold their money and look elsewhere. And the really pissed-off ones? They email you or write a blog post labeling you an idiot.

270 THE TRIBE HAS SPOKEN

My Web site needed a redesign, and I spent six weeks creating a new look. I was excited, and the world was going to love this design—it was clean, user friendly,
