

a share of the profits went to my firm, under the arrangement I had with the owner.

The trades were small to begin with, but I guess they were testing me out for efficiency and integrity. Once they were satisfied, the orders slowly started getting bigger and more regular. My commissions were growing steadily, and I was confident that in another couple of years I would be able to realize my dream of owning a house in Ghatkopar.