

[illegible]

On my podcast, I was pleasantly surprised by one couple with a lot of debt. They were more confident than most couples I speak to, even ones with a fraction of that debt.

I found this inspiring. This couple, with more than half a million dollars owed, were still calm, confident, and secure in their relationship. It shows that while the amount of debt obviously matters quite a bit, we also have control over how we react emotionally to our financial situation.