

and arrows depicting the flow of money – i.e. from your current account to your savings etc.

Next, consider whether this setup is working for you. If it's too complex or confusing, or if you realize that some of it doesn't make sense, it might be time to look at streamlining or switching things up. Create your ideal structure and flow, and then write a list of the changes you need to make to get there.

Exercise: Create your money habit tracker

Now take some time with all of the resources that you've gained so far, and start to consider how you can incorporate new, positive financial habits into your life while minimizing or getting rid of ones that no longer serve you. Lots of journals now include a little habit tracker, or you can create your own in a notebook using the simple model below. To use it, just list your habits on the left, and then colour in or check the box when you've completed your habit:

Habit	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday	Sunday