

The Emotional Spending Cycle

Obviously, there will be triggers and factors that are unique to you, but the process is usually similar for everyone, and similarly difficult to opt out of without doing some of the deeper work on self-worth that we've discussed. I'd like you to think about what your own triggers are – maybe look back at some of the things that you've bought and come to regret and think about the circumstances surrounding them. Think about what your own cycle looks like and how you might be able to break it using some of the practical techniques that we'll cover in this step. Make sure that you consider both how