

got, and its potential to grow, and figure out the best way to make those things fit together.

Exercise: Aligning your resources and your lifestyle aspirations

Take a moment – or perhaps slightly longer than a moment – to think about this. Are your career and lifestyle goals aligned, and are they moving at a similar pace if so? If not, are there some adjustments to either your circumstances (where possible), or your expectations about your timelines or aspirations that you need to make? It may well be that, in moving through the previous steps of this process, you've re-evaluated some of your lifestyle aims and desires anyway, but now is a really good time to reflect and meditate on this a little, journaling it out if this is helpful.

An extra habit: setting and reviewing financial goals

Once you've sought to create some balance between the lifestyle that you want, and the lifestyle that your income will afford you, you should be in a good place to look at setting some financial goals. Goal setting is another common practice in both wellbeing and personal finance discourse, but it's important, when the goal is to focus on our financial wellbeing, to make sure that both are applied, and that our