The person I must thank most for making this book possible is, without doubt, my editor Anna Steadman. There were times when writing felt impossible, when I lost confidence in both my ideas and my place as the author of this book, and you always knew just when to push and when to encourage, and when to allow me to draw my own conclusions about what was missing. I feel so lucky to have been able to work with you again. Similarly, I owe huge thanks to my agent, Julia Silk, for running through the various iterations and ideas for this book with me and helping me to figure out what it should be, and for never complaining when a quick catch-up turned into over an hour on the phone. To Daisy Buchanan, thank you for your notes of encouragement, and to Otegha Uwagba, thank you for the never-ending food for thought. To the many contributors – Jo Love, Aja Barber, Suzy Reading and Anna Codrea-Rado, thank you for your insights and wisdom, and to everyone who shared something personal about their relationship with money with me, I am eternally grateful for your openness and candour.
