

About the author

Simran Kaur is an angel and venture investor, former financial columnist, international TEDx speaker, and founder of Friends That Invest, one of the largest global platforms aimed at increasing financial literacy for women and minorities everywhere.

Through her podcast, bestselling book and speaking work Sim has helped millions of young women build confidence with money and investing, earning her a place on the 2023 Forbes 30 Under 30 Asia list, recognition as a 2024 Cartier Women's Initiative Fellow and 2024 Young New Zealander of the Year.

Her work has been recognised across the globe by Vogue (India), Business Insider (US), ABC News (Australia), CTV (Canada), University of Oxford Women in Business, Glamour magazine, and many more.

As a speaker, Sim has been invited to share her advice for would-be women investors internationally, from a TEDx talk to events sponsored by government agencies, Google and other global corporations and universities. In 2023, she was invited to address the UK Houses of Parliament on International Women's Day.

Friends That Invest was founded on the principle that investing should be for everyone. It aims to break down the misconceptions, demystify the jargon, and offer a step-by-step pathway that women everywhere can follow to start growing their hard-earned money — because it's only through financial independence that women can be truly free to make their own choices and take charge of their lives.

Friends That Invest has now become an online phenomenon: through her podcast, investing master classes, and social media platforms like Instagram, Simran has created a vibrant, supportive online community of 'investie besties' where women can come together to learn and to share their experiences and ideas. The lessons Sim herself has learned about how you can think about, live more confidently with, and grow your money are now shared in this book. Now fully revised and updated, this edition takes you through the basics of why and how to start investing — and walks you
