

Having a circle of friends who are open to learning and growing together is a powerful way to move ahead together. Every single person has something to teach us. Setting up a monthly brunch with your friends to discuss and go over your investments is an activity that is starting to become more normalised, and benefits everyone involved.