

Lazy 3 portfolio 101

The Lazy 3 Portfolio is built around three types of investments:

- Domestic Index Fund: This is a broad market fund that invests in companies in your home country, such as the NZX 50 for New Zealanders, the ASX 200 for Australians or the S&P 500 for Americans.
- International Index Fund: This fund spreads your money across developed markets around the world, giving you exposure to global companies and industries beyond your own backyard. If you live in the US, this would be funds that invest in everything but the US.
- Bond Fund: This provides stability and lower risk. Bonds don't tend to grow as fast as shares, but they can help smooth out the bumps when markets get wobbly.

A typical allocation might look something like this:

- 40 per cent Domestic Index Fund
- 40 per cent International Index Fund
- 20 per cent Bond Fund
