

Principles of Wealth Accumulation

Riches begin with a state of mind and with definiteness of purpose.

Now that you know most of the possible financial investment options and assuming you are wise enough to select the right ones based on your risk taking capacity, do you think there is anything that can stop you from becoming rich?

Yes, there is another, lesser known aspect to getting wealthy. If there was not, then anyone and everyone who understood the basic technical terms, read the investment options and actually went ahead and invested money would have become financially free by now. But the fact is that only 1% people in the world are financially free – though most of the population have access to the technical knowledge on investments.

What are these aspects that stop people from becoming truly wealthy? Can these also be learnt like the technical aspects? Are they easy to learn?
