

As Steve Jobs said: "It is important to have passion and love for what you are doing. You must know what is driving you to your goal. There is a simple but logical reason to know this, and the reason is that whatever you are trying to achieve is not simple or easy. There will be times when the going will get tough. There will be times when you would feel like quitting. At that time, no technique or knowledge would work. The only element that can take you through that tough time is your love and passion for the work that you are doing, your reason or the drive behind your goal. If the reason is not strong enough, you will give up in those tough times."

So, if you are reading this book to achieve financial freedom, I am sure you have a strong reason as to why you want to achieve financial freedom and what you can do for your family, society, country or the world if you have this financial freedom in your hands.

I had some very strong reasons, which I will not hesitate to share with you. This goal originated because I wanted to quit the rat race I was stuck in.. The more time I spent in my job, I progressed in the so called "rat race" but at the sametime, I was spending less time with my family and was taking on too much stress to sustain for extended periods. I knew I was not made for politics in a job environment. I wanted to be simple, straight and honest – traits which often do not yield great results in today's jobs. I was just adding stress every day to my life. The thought that one day I would need to quit my job was always in the back of my mind. To do that, I needed sufficient bank balance or financial security, and this is where the dream of financial freedom originated.

As I went about trying to fulfil this dream and achieving it step by step, I realized that I truly loved doing certain things like teaching and gardening.

These later became a part of my mission in life.

1. Plant a million trees and contribute towards a cleaner planet
2. Help educate underprivileged children and uplift our society

These goals are in sync with what I love to do. Well, you may have your own reason to chase financial freedom. You may want to contribute to people around you or you may want to just have that freedom to decide things on your own or just want enough money to see that your family is
