

Now, these numbers are not meant to scare you or to make you feel guilty about not starting sooner. They are only meant to motivate you to start saving now "through a systematic financial plan" (and not just through your savings bank account). If you are already a regular saver with a "systematic financial plan", well then congratulations! You already have that "unfair" advantage over everyone else. You will learn more about creating your own systematic financial plan in the later sections of the book.

Respect yourself and your money

Respect attracts money, this is one of the reasons why the rich get richer. If you are respectful of your money, and do what needs to be done with it, you will become a magnet, attracting more and more money.

I am sure you have encountered people with a golden touch for money. However, this is not something you are born with. It is something you learn; you must learn to be blessed with financial freedom.

You may say, I already respect money, what else do I need to do? Well, you may feel that you do so. Take out your wallet and see how the notes are organized in it. Are they all facing different ways? Are the tens mixed with the twenties and fifties? Are they just stuffed in there, so that you have to unravel them to find out what they actually are? How you actually keep your money is where the respect for your money starts. You are expected to care for it the way you care for other important things in your life.

Get rid of credit cards

A credit card is a wonderful tool which allows you to buy things which you do not want with the money that you do not have.

Most of the western world is under serious credit card debt.

And India is not too far behind. It has now become a status symbol to have a number of credit cards in your wallet.
