

- Track Expenses Everyday: Start tracking your expenses daily. It is not weekly, it is not monthly, it is daily. Everyday, before going to sleep, make sure that all your family expenses are entered into some kind of a spreadsheet which arranges those expenses into appropriate categories. If you are wondering what daily tracking of expenses has to do with reduction of expenses, here is some food for thought. Many scientific studies have proven that just the act of daily tracking of expenses can reduce your expenses by as much as 15%. This act of dealing with your expenses on a daily basis sits in your sub conscious mind and controls needless expenses. It is not only proven scientifically. I have seen it with my own life. I have seen it with hundreds and thousands of freedom seekers who have interacted with me over the last few years. Some of them were amazed to know that their 'true' expenses were much higher than they ever thought. Some of them confirmed that daily expense tracking has brought down their expenses by as high as 25% also. So, go on, create an expense sheet, download an app for your smart phone, track it online or simply visit the Freedom Portal to download a ready made excel sheet which I personally use. Customise it if you want and start using it right away.
- Seven golden words: Whenever you are about to spend any money, always look for an opportunity of price reduction. Do take the time to compare prices and ask for special discounts before finalizing a purchase. Just seven simple golden words like "Is that the best you can do?" are likely to provide surprising success. As consumers, we leave a lot more money on the table than we think. We may hesitate to ask for discounts but it is worth all the effort. These 7 golden words do not require any haggling. In fact the more softly and kindly you use them, the better they work, simply because it does not create a confrontational approach.
- Check your expenditure: Of course, all expenditures cannot build your assets. But continuously asking questions like; "Is this expenditure contributing to my wealth?" helps to redirect the use of your money. It is no coincidence that the wealthy put the money in their homes instead of their cars. Homes usually appreciate while cars almost never do.
