

- Rule of 72 (By when will I double my money? or By when will inflation reduce my money to half)
- How much Life Insurance cover do I need?
- Is my Portfolio Balanced?
- What are the current returns on my Portfolio?
- What is my total capital gains tax liability on selling a real estate?
- Should I take individual or group Health Insurance?
- Should I pre-pay my home loan?
- What is the health insurance cover that I should buy?
- What will be the Future Value of Money?
- What is the Present Value of Money?
- How much Gratuity will I get?
- Should I transfer a loan from one financial institution to the other?
- Should I buy or rent a house?

There are many more which we will continue to add on our Freedom Portal from time to time. With this, we conclude one of the extremely important sections of this book. All these 19 wealth management principles, listed in this section, may not be new to you and you may have already implemented some of them in your life. They seem simple to understand and implement. But let me caution you as well. You will face all kind of challenges and priorities when you start implementing these in your life. It is not only you but your family, relatives and friends who will feel the impact when you try to save that 2% extra or try to pay yourself before you pay others. You will have to transform yourself for these principles to work for you. I already stated this point in the beginning of this book. What keeps so many people from becoming financially free? The principles are simple and straight forward. The most difficult part is to bring about that transformation in yourself to be able to make these principles a part of your daily life.

I am not at all trying to de-motivate you. I am only trying to prepare you for the change that you must bring about in yourself, if the goals and dreams for which you are working are important to you. The question you need to ask yourself is whether the discomfort of changing yourself and sacrificing the smaller things in life for a bigger objective is worth the effort