

Let's Create & Track Your Own Financial Freedom Plan

Those who plan do better than those who do not plan even though they may not be able to stick to their plan.

— Winston Churchill

The proof of the pudding is in the eating. So far, we have learnt about multiple financial investment tools, the wealth management practices of millionaires and learnt how to maintain a balanced portfolio.

We now come to the most important aspect in the journey towards financial freedom, namely creating our own financial freedom plan, which is practical and achievable. This chapter is also about starting to track your actual results against the plan and making sure you always stay on track... until you achieve freedom. Achieving your end goal requires meticulous planning along with disciplined and consistent tracking of your investments. It also means revisiting your portfolio and investment strategies to ensure that your plan is not being derailed by external factors
