

After I left Amway in 2007, I started a slow but steady process of gaining more knowledge on financial freedom and slowly worked on a month on month personal financial plan. I will share this plan with you in the later sections of this book along with all the learning I gained on my journey towards financial freedom. Finally, the most important thing that financial freedom helped me achieve-planting trees and educating underprivileged children in our society, without worrying about the financial security of my immediate family.

Initially when I started my journey towards financial freedom, I did not know where life would take me, how many more goals would emerge, and how I would achieve some of the existing ones. The bliss of "giving" to others became the purpose of my life. How did money contribute to this? It has given me the time and freedom to opt out of the rat race and instead execute my plans, because "My family does not have to worry about my monthly salary to survive any more."

Whatever your goal is, you can always make it happen. Step by step, you can take charge of your destiny and achieve financial freedom. The power is within you.

The road to financial independence does not begin in a bank or a financial planner's office but in your head. It begins with your thoughts. And if you have taken some time to read this book, you have just taken the first step. I will take you through this journey with me. I can guide you, help you, coach you, mentor you, but ultimately, it is "your" dreams and goals that have to drive you!

Never give up on your true dreams in life, thinking they are difficult; or that no one has ever succeeded in them earlier; or how will you achieve them; or what will people say if you fail, or how they will react if you actually do live your dream. They will all watch you in awe, appreciate you and ultimately take inspiration from you.

Keep dreaming. it's the first step to them coming true.
