

a few hours to discover what is happening to all the money that you are earning, what your current state of cash flow is, and where you are headed.

Start thinking, start writing. Some of the points below may help you. Do not be in a hurry. It concerns your financial freedom. You are trying to achieve something extraordinary in life, something that only 1% of people in the world ever achieve. Nothing worthwhile can be achieved without enough sacrifice. You have to take this very seriously. Therefore, a realistic number now will help you plan better.

Let us go through some of the points that will enable you to come up with the correct cash out flow. As you go through these memory joggers, just start jotting down the cash value of the answer. Some points may not be applicable to you. Strike them out after careful consideration.

I will give you a working template sheet later to help you write all this down very systematically but as of now, just start scribbling these numbers based on whatever data you have.

Memory Joggers for Cash Outflow:

- How much do you spend on groceries?
- Are you living in a rented apartment? How much rent you are paying monthly? Are there any annual charges as well? Are there any society or association charges?
- Do you have any outgoing EMIs every month? Do you default in paying them sometimes, leading to additional charges?
- Do your children's school fees include annual charges as well as transportation charges? What about expenses on their school uniforms and school books?
- Is there a regular routine expenditure to get school homework done for your children?
- Do your children go for summer camps and other tuition classes?
- Do your children often apply for other competitive exams which cost you fees for registration and books and/or tuitions?
- Do you maintain a garden or a lawn? How much do you spend on it?
