

Rewards will come..and they will come BIG !!

Before I hand over the baton to you, if I have to tell you the single biggest challenge I faced in this journey, then it would be the idea of having faith in the concept of "Delayed Gratification". I was challenged, and made fun of – uncountable times in this journey – something that made me even more determined to succeed. But I must honestly confess that I almost lost faith in the concept of 'Delayed Gratification' many times before hanging on to see its magic unfold.

Let me share a simple scenario to explain how human psychology typically works.

Assume you were to choose between getting ₹1,000 right now or ₹1,500 after 12 months. It is highly likely that you will choose ₹1,000 right now in your pocket. This is a classic case of choosing the present over an unsure future, failing to see the substantial 50% benefit.

Assume now that you were to choose between ₹1,000 after 5 years and ₹1,500 after 6 years. It is very likely that you will now choose ₹1,500.

In both the above cases, the situation is the same – a 1 year wait pays you 50% bonus – but the results are starkly different.

This is where we, as humans, underestimate delayed gratification. Future seems hazy in our minds and therefore we tend to discount it at a lower rate (as happened in the first case). But once we are taken to the future, we can take wiser decisions (as happened in the second case).

Your goals, your dreams, your passion is something that can take you to the future and help you take informed decisions before you go on a spending spree.

Trust me, rewards will come – and they will come BIG enough for you to ponder on your next challenge. What will be your next challenge? "How to manage such amounts of money flowing in every month?" – A welcome challenge, isn't it?

So now it is up to you and I wish you all the best for your Journey.