

Indebted To

There is a good debt and a bad debt. I take pride that I carry a huge 'debt' – albeit a good one – from each of my readers and friends, those who have read the first revision of this book or any of my other books, those who personally interacted with me and those who silently recommended it to their circle.

I am indebted to you.

As much as I would love to name each one of you, I am constrained with the available space. I absolutely realise and believe that no one individual can achieve anything of his / her own. Anything worthwhile is born out of feedback, constructive criticism and unwavering faith. Without all these inputs, this second revision would not have been feasible.

I thank each one of you!