

Life can surely be much more beautiful with enough money in your hands.

Why do I need wealth?

Some of you may have a valid question that may occur to you time and again. It obviously strikes you more as you become more mature with age and experience.

Is life about money?

No, life is not about money. It is about God. It is about love, family and relationships. It is about "giving" instead of "taking" or "becoming". It is also about personal evolution and growth across all spheres of life – physical, mental and spiritual. And anyone who tells you otherwise is probably trying to sell you something. I cannot think of any method certain of creating an unhappy life than to devote it to the primary pursuit of money. However, the pursuit of financial freedom to secure and enhance life's true needs is not only perfectly appropriate but also wise. For those, who do not accept the responsibility of financial freedom at an early age, get thrown out of balance at a later stage in life.

As the Bible says,

"Money is not the root of evils". It is the "love for money" that is the root of all evils.

Money is just an instrument. It is up to us what we want to do with this powerful instrument. What is more important is not to get attached to money. Use it to take care of you and your family. Use it to help others. Accumulate and use it to educate under privileged children. Use it the way it is supposed to be used and it will never cause any evil. It is in fact the lack of money that is the root of all evil. Financial distress is an evil. 90% of all divorces have a common cause of quarrels traced back to money and finances. Debt⁹ and poverty lead to other serious social evils.
