

from under a great many other small, money-eating expenses. He found he now lived better in ways that counted, and he saved as well.

Whether or not you are short of money, I suggest you fill in a list of your own. Think about expenses you can reduce or eliminate if you really want to. Set down the amounts per week, total them, think about that total, ask yourself what that sum could buy for you in one week, in two weeks, in a month, in a year.

This experience is important. Here is a list to point the way:

Shoe shines	$	Items of which only
Smokes	$	you know
Alcoholic drinks	$	_____	$
Entertainment of a		_____	$
casual nature	$	_____	$
Gambling	$
Bad debts	$
(Are you a sucker?)		Total	$
Extra adornment	$	Grand Total	$
Fancy food	$
Total	$

Chapter by chapter you are growing more and more familiar with the Supreme Secret.

CHECKING ON CHAPTER 5:

Will you master money—or will it master you?

Once you earn a considerable surplus above your needs, you should enjoy both riches and peace of mind. You will have peace of mind if you have mastered money, but not if it has mastered you. Too many men use money merely for conspicuous consumption. Too many, having millions, live in fear of losing them. If money or anything else gets in the way of your peace of mind, take peace of mind and let the other go.

Money that benefits you comes most often from work that benefits you

A man needs enough for comfort and for a good share of the world's luxuries. Aiming at these and retaining his self-