

BULL AND BEAR MARKETS

In the stock and bond markets, someone who forecasts that prices are going to go up is sometimes described as a “bull.”

The opposite of this—someone who predicts that prices will fall—is known as a “bear.” So, a bull market is one in which prices are steadily rising, and a bear market is one in which prices are falling.

In everyday language, risk means the possibility of something bad happening, but to economists it can be a good or a bad thing.

See also: When markets don't DO THEIR JOB | What does the FUTURE hold? | Is greed GOOD? | For a RAINY day...