

Industry powers the economy

In the modern world, goods and services are produced by a range of different industries—from farming to online businesses—which are essential to economic growth and prosperity.