

assumes the US historical experience is sufficiently representative of what future retirees may expect for their own retirements. We will start with this assumption and then continue to work our way through the assumptions to see how alternative approaches would impact our guidelines about sustainable spending from investments.