

Acknowledgments

Writing a book is a major endeavor, and I have been helped along the way by countless individuals. First and foremost, I would like to thank my colleagues at McLean Asset Management for providing the vision and resources to make this book possible. In particular, I'm grateful for the leadership and willingness of Alex Murguia and Dean Umemoto to build a firm that can turn my research on retirement income planning into practical solutions for real-world retirees. I would also like to thank the entire advisory and social-media team at McLean: Kevin Brawner, Athena Chang, Rob Cordeau, Jason Dye, Bob French, Paula Friedman, Joel Gemmell, Danielle Jordan, Christian Litscher, Kyle Meyer, Robert Papa, Mark Witaschek, and Jessica Wunder.

The team at Mineral Interactive has also provided invaluable help in preparing this book and building my Retirement Researcher website. Thank you to Jud and Kim Mackrill, Zach McDonald, Johnny Sandquist, Rebecca Tschetter, and everyone else there who has contributed to this effort.

I am also deeply indebted to Don and Lynne Komai and the Watermark Design Office for their assistance in developing the layout and design for this book.

Furthermore, I am grateful to the American College of Financial Services for their leadership and focus on retirement income planning, particularly Bob Johnson, Michael Finke, David Littell, and Jamie Hopkins.

When it comes to retirement income planning, I wish to thank countless other practitioners and researchers who have helped me along the way. A partial list must include Bill Bengen, Bill Bernstein, David Blanchett, Jason Branning, J. Brent Burns, Bill Cason, Curtis Cloke, Jeremy Cooper, Dirk Cotton, Harold Evensky, Francois Gadenne, Jonathan Guyton, David Jacobs, Robert Huebscher, Stephen Huxley, Michael Kitces, Manish Malhotra, Moshe Milevsky, Aaron Minney, Dan Moisand, Kerry Pechter, Robert Powell, John M. Prizer, Jr., Dick Purcell, Bill Sharpe, Joe
