

the only thing we can control is how we respond to the challenges and opportunities that present themselves.

The biggest single factor that determines your success or failure when these events occur—or as an investor entirely for that matter—is the way you behave due to how you psychologically contextualize what is occurring.

And as it turns out, that is (somewhat) in your control.

---

214 By now you know I hate the 20% definition but let's work with it for this exercise.

215 Michael Batnick is Managing Partner at Ritholtz Wealth Management.