

Do have a sense of humor about this

My favorite thought on this came from a fund manager who, in the midst of a nasty sell-off, was asked by a fellow trader how he was doing.

“Sleeping like a baby,” he calmly replied.

“Really? Given this crazy market, how can you sleep like a baby?”

“It’s easy!” he said. “I wake up screaming every two hours, wet myself, and cry for Mommy.”

That sort of gallows humor is typical on Wall Street. But if you follow the good advice above, you can sleep soundly, knowing your portfolio is working for you.

Up next, we see what happens when people follow the advice above.

346 Callie Cox, “Running the numbers: Some stats on how the stock market moves,” OptimistiCallie (August 30, 2024).

347 We discuss cowboy accounts in Part 4.