

KEY TAKEAWAYS: PAYING FOR COLLEGE

- You should know exactly how much each school you are interested in is going to cost you before you choose which one to attend.
- You need to compare your future debt to your expected salary. If you know you are going into a field that does not make a ton of money, you cannot bury yourself in debt.
- Speak to your parents about how much money they can afford to give you for school. Just because the government expects your parents to be able to pay $8,000 per year does not mean they actually can pay $8,000 per year.
- Apply for as many scholarships as possible. This is free money! And many, many scholarships go unclaimed every year.
- Avoid private loans to the best of your ability.
- Complete the FAFSA each year you are in school. Because your or your parents' financial information may change from one year to the next, you need to make sure you submit the FAFSA each year.
