

Budget beauty – the sub-$100 skincare routine

Before I started on the savings plan, I was devoted to fancy lotions and potions, but now my skincare routine has been pared back to costing a tick under $100 a year, or $45 every six months. I don't have a qualification in skincare, but I buy the products below and use them daily for my sensitive skin – with no kickback or freebies – and I swear by them.

Pocket Money everyday beauty routine

- Coconut oil, to cleanse and remove make-up, and as a night moisturiser – $5 from any supermarket or health food store
- Lacura Revive Hyaluronic Gel – $10 from Aldi
- Essano Rosehip Oil – $20 from Woolworths
- Kmart Moisturiser Sunscreen SPF 50+ – $6
- Lacura Clarifying Facial Scrub with Green Tea and Olive Leaf – $4 from Aldi

Total: $45 for a six-month supply

Applied for day

- Lacura Revive Hyaluronic Gel
- Essano Rosehip Oil
- Kmart Moisturiser Sunscreen

Applied at night

- Coconut oil to remove make-up
- Lacura Clarifying Facial Scrub
- Lacura Revive Hyaluronic Gel
- Essano Rosehip Oil

This el cheapo skincare regime has replaced an eye-watering raft of higher-end products, and my face hasn't peeled off.
