

- minutes or until they have all opened. Discard any that haven't opened. Strain the mussels and place them on a tray to cool down.
2. To make the aioli, mix the mayonnaise with the garlic until the mixture has become thick. Season to taste and place in the fridge until needed.
 3. Heat the olive oil for the chilli paste in a small non-stick sauté pan over a low heat and then add the chilli, garlic, ginger and salt. Cook gently and stir frequently until the mixture has lost its raw taste; this will probably take about 10 minutes. Remove from the heat and allow to cool. Once cooled, toss the mussels through the chilli paste then reserve in the fridge until ready to serve.
 4. For the pickled shallots, toss the shallots with the salt and place in a non-reactive bowl. Bring the vinegar and sugar to the boil in a small saucepan, then pour over the shallots. Cover with plastic film and allow to cool. Once cooled, strain the shallots and set aside.
 5. Lay the mussels on a plate and scatter the pickled shallots and coriander cress over them. Serve the aioli in a bowl on the side for dipping.
