

Emily's tightass tipples

A caveat: I am not a wine expert by any stretch, but I've had a lot of practice with cut-rate vinos over my savings journey and I swear these go down easy.

- South Point Estate rosé (Aldi), $5
It's won upwards of 14 awards, including a gold medal at the 2016 Sydney International Wine Competition, and that is good enough for me.
- Portone pinot grigio rosé, $10
From Italy with love, and it's amore from the first sip.
- Cono Sur pinot noir, $8
A Brazilian wine that no guest of mine has ever wrinkled their nose at.
- Veuve Olivier French Sparkling Wine NV (Aldi), $8
For toasting your successful saving.
- Jacob's Creek 2016 riesling, $9
Good for chasing a cheap and cheerful mid-week dinner.

Vinomofo

The fellas who run this online wine store and curation business promise quality quaffing without the 'bowties and BS', which makes them ideal for sharing their drops with first home buyers. Founder and CEO Justin Dry has dusted off the budget corner of his cellar and suggests these bottles, which pack more punch on the palate than the hip pocket.

- Art Of War, $15
'A big, badass, bold shiraz from the Barossa Valley made with Kym
